The minor in business administration introduces students to the foundation areas of business by drawing on core courses to give a broad, non-specialized exposure to business. It is designed to provide entry-level employment skills for a wide range of jobs and to help provide a bridge to the business world for non-business majors.
Success in the Classroom

Studying at Breech means learning inside and outside of the classroom, and perhaps most important, as part of a team. “You normally don’t see success in isolation,” says Professor Mike Shirley. “It’s normally part of connections. It’s normally part of other people. It’s normally part of a team. Highly effective leaders are only as effective as the team around them.”

Business administration minors take courses in:

- Accounting
- Finance
- Economics
- Marketing
- Management

Business administration minors study techniques for:

- Organizing
- Planning
- Managing
- Leading

A Competitive Edge

No matter what major you choose at Drury University, it is likely some basic business skills will help you be successful. Adding the business administration minor can also help boost your resume. In today’s job market, a minor in business enhances your qualifications and experience and can help you stand out.

Examples of majors at Drury that pair with a business minor:

- Advertising and public relations
- Arts administration
- Biology
- Chemistry
- Communication
- Computer science
- Environmental studies
- Graphic design and design arts
- Psychology
- Spanish

The business administration minor is open to all non-business major students.