1. What is OCR?

On-campus recruiting (OCR) is when employers come to campus to interview job candidates. You must follow an application process to try and secure an interview, just like any other job process.

2. How do I apply?

The application instructions often vary from company to company, so be sure to read the job posting thoroughly to find out what you need to do. Generally, you’ll need three things: cover letter, resume, and and your unofficial transcript.

3. Why do some jobs require me to apply twice?

Some job postings will direct you to apply through both the Career Planning & Development office and the company’s website. This is so that tracking and screening can be completed as quickly and easily as possible. Always make sure to apply to both places if it’s required!

4. When will I hear if I am chosen to interview?

Career Planning & Development will contact you after the company informs us of their selections. We will contact you whether you were selected or not, so please be patient and keep an eye on your inbox!

5. What companies have recently recruited on campus?
